How Good is a Good Wine?

Wine Spectator's 100 point Scale Explained

- *95-100 points: Classic wine, the finest
- *90-94 points: Outstanding, A wine with Superior qualities
- *85-89: Very Good- A wine with special qualities
- *80-84 points: Good, a solid well-crafted wine

Wine Spectator Top 100 Wines of the Year

Every year Wine Spectator magazine publishes a list of the 100 finest wines they sampled and scored that year. Many of our wines appear on that list. Those wines are noted on the list in red font stating which rank they received. Wines are tasted and scored based on: color, nose, taste, finish, and the excitement factor experienced by the wine professionals that rank them. They are always tasted next to other similar wines for comparison.

Food and Wine Pairings

There is no finer way to compliment an amazing meal than to pair it with the perfect wine. While food and wine pairings are an art form, here are my quick tips to selecting a perfect pairing:

1. Food and wine did not magically appear in the same geographic regions, they grew together. So pair Italian wines with Italian food! This is an easy way to start.
2. Similar flavors and intensity. A light fish can be accentuated beautifully by a light bodied white wine. Perhaps a Sauvignon Blanc, with its natural citrus aromas would be a perfect choice. We think about putting lemon on fish, so a white wine with citrus aromas is perfect. A heavy steak needs a heavy red wine such as Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel, Barolo, Brunello di Montalcino, Bordeaux etc. Leaner meats such as lamb or veal pair nicely with leaner red wines. While the tannin (natural astringent feeling that you experience on the roof of your mouth, not a flavor) eases the fatty nature of beef, it can overwhelm the flavors of leaner meat. So leaner meat, leaner wine- try a Malbec or Merlot!
3. Is there a sauce involved? Ottavio goes to great lengths to describe his dishes and specials on the menu. If he says “prepared in a Pinot Grigio sauce” stick to Pinot Grigio! If it says a “Burgundy Wine sauce” stick to Pinot Noir. If it says a creamy sauce I suggest a buttery Chardonnay such as Shafer or Rombauer. If it’s a pasta dish with marinara—again think Italian food, Italian wine! You cannot go wrong with these basic principles.

My Favorites?

While people ask me every day what is your favorite wine, that is a little like asking who is your favorite child! But, with that in mind, here are some personal favorites of mine:

Keenan Chardonnay: Crisp, slightly buttery and luscious. 55

Colomé Malbec- Rich aromas with dark fruit flavors and spice 35

Keenan Merlot- Hard to find, fruity, complex and elegant 60

Turley Old-Vine Zinfandel- Rich and complex with a long delicious finish 60

Brochelle Syrah: like liquid velvet! A beautiful, smooth, earthy wine 65

Wine Wednesdays and Wine Events

If you are interested in learning about new wines, come back every Wednesday. Each Wednesday I select 3 red and 3 white wines that we do not normally carry and offer them to you by the glass or by the bottle at retail price! I try to select grapes and regions that are off-the-beaten-path. We offer a tasting event one Thursday of each month as well.
